- Actions to Stop Doing: The team should stop isolating tasks from one another, as it makes combining them into the project much more complicated. The team should also stop placing the task work on a low priority, as not much effort is put into completing it.
- Actions to Start Doing: The team should have meetings outside the daily scrum to help members who fall behind catch up. Aside from this, the team should reorganize their time management so that user story tasks are completed in a timely manner.
- Actions to Keep Doing: The team should continue to hold scrum meetings under 15 minutes, as they are a succinct way of monitoring everyone's progress.
- Work Completed: The entirety of the first user story was completed in this sprint. Aside from that, only most of remaining two user stories were completed.
- Work Not Completed: The final task of user stories 2 could not be implemented by the end of this Sprint. This is primarily due to sudden issues in implementing a properly working search bar. Being unable to do this in time halted progress on testing the algorithm properly.
- Work Completion Rate: Two out of three of the user stories were completed. The local database is set up on firebase and we have added more interaction to the website. Ideally, the team intended on accomplishing this task in roughly 30-40 hours throughout the Sprint. Over this two week period, each task would be handled at most once every other day. This team should have set an ideal goal of having each member devote roughly 2-3 hours a day during the work week. If this goal is carried into the next Sprint, perhaps more of the tasks could get completed on time.
